CEDAR CITY PRIMARY ELECTION RESULTS

by Kelsey KEENER

IRON COUNTY TODAY

The Municipal Primary Election results as of Aug. 16 indicate that Cedar City Council candidates Tyler Melling, Terri Hartley, Craig Isom, Don Oswald, Adam Hahn and Brittanie Parry will be moving forward to the General Election in November.

The voter turnout in Cedar City for the primaries was 32.88 percent – 3,978 ballots cast out of 12,098 registered voters.

As of Aug. 16, Melling received 1,880 votes; Hartley received 1,766 votes; Isom received 1,513 votes; Oswald received 1,032 votes; Hahn received 837 votes; and Parry received 621 votes out of 10,036 votes cast.

Melling explained that he feels the votes that he received reflect the voters desire for his commitment in making positive changes in the community.

"It shows that the voters care and have been following the issues and they're wanting to be engaged and they want someone who's going to listen," he said. "I really think I'm the candidate who is most willing and able to reach across two opposing views and try to find places where the common ground lies. ... I think most people in this area, they agree that we want a place where we can hold onto our roots, but growth is an inevitability, so how can we honor the past while going into the future?"

Hartley expressed her gratitude for the support she received during her campaign.

TYLER MELLING IS LEADING VOTE GETTER

"I am very grateful for the trust and support shown me by the voters in this race," she said. "Serving on the City Council these last four years has been a privilege and honor, and with our community's continued support, I look forward to the opportunity to serve four more years. My over four decades of banking leadership experience have taught me very important principles that I use in helping to strengthen our city and support wise growth, and I am thankful our voters recognize the value in having proven experience and leadership. Thank you to everyone for your wonderful support through this campaign."

Isom also thanked those who participated in the vote, either as residents or candidates, and said he feels the primaries reflected the importance of the community.

"We would always aspire to better voter turnout, but I thank all for their involvement," he said. "I am particularly grateful for the 13 that threw their hat in the ring to run for city council. It's just indicative of our commitment and our concern for our community. I applaud the effort of all and I just think that number of candidates deepened the discussion and enhanced our exploration of issues and so I just want to say thank you."

Oswald indicated his appreciation for his supporters.

"(I am) thankful for those people who voted and the support," he said. "We look forward to the general election in November."

Hahn said is looking forward to proceeding with his campaign.

"I would like to thank all of our volunteers and supporters who helped build our momentum going into the final stretch of the election," he said. "I'm looking forward to knocking on more doors and making more phone calls to have conversations with the people of Cedar City about why I'm the best candidate to represent them on the Cedar City Council."

Parry said she would have liked to see a voter turnout initiative to encourage people to vote and help voters understand the ballot correctly.

"I felt like if we had had some kind of voter registration and pushed on how to vote and how to mail those ballots in, especially for our senior citizens, more people would have understood that (you can vote for three candidates)," Parry said. "... I would like to have the chance to continue to let people know that they have a different choice than the 'same old; same old'."

Stewart takes on youth suicide prevention efforts in Utah

Congressman Chris Stewart (R-UT) facilitated the discussion on suicide prevention between local organizations and community members at the Central Utah Youth Suicide Prevention Congressional Round Table.

Central Utah has seen a spike in recent suicide attempts and deaths. The local community gathered to hear how Congressman Stewart, as well as local organizations, plan to combat the tragic trend of youth suicide and make existing resources more accessible to those in emotional distress.

“Every one of us has been impacted by suicide in one way or another. This includes our neighbors, co-workers, family members, and friends. We have seen an alarming increase in suicides in our state, particularly among our youth; even as recent as this past weekend. It is our responsibility to reach out to those with mental health issues to intervene and help them realize they are not alone. Today’s discussion brought me hope. Hope that through kindness and support, we can help more families avoid this tragedy. We must share this hope. Hearing from those brave enough to share their stories, I learned that in addition to existing resources, we ourselves can be a source of strength to those struggling with thoughts of suicide,” said Rep. Chris Stewart

The Congressman also became lead co-sponsor of the Improving Mental Health Access for Students Act.

This legislation aims to raise college students’ awareness of existing suicide prevention resources. In addition, Rep. Stewart, who sits on the House Appropriations Committee, secured an additional $3 million (for a total of $20 million) for the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline.

Suicide Prevention has been one of Congressman Stewart’s top priorities during his time in Congress. Last year, Congressman Stewart’s National Suicide Hotline Improvement Act became law. This legislation called for a study to determine the best three-digit dialing code for the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline.

Under Stewart’s directive, the U.S. Federal Communications Commission (FCC) released “988” as the recommended three-digit dialing code for the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline. This comes as a result of Rep. Chris Stewart’s National Suicide Hotline Improvement Act, which became law last year, that called for a study to determine the best three-digit dialing code for the lifeline. Following the release of the FCC’s report, Congressman Stewart issued the following statement: “Utahns are facing the tragic effects of suicide at some of the highest rates in the nation. This announcement by the FCC is another important step to provide critical resources to address mental health and suicide in our state and country. This will save lives.”

“Through kindness and support, we can help more families avoid this tragedy.”

OPINION

Death, Taxes and Socks

The opinions stated in this article are solely those of the author and not of Iron County Today.

It happened in a Davis County city, but it could have occurred (and does) in cities throughout Utah. You especially hear it during election seasons.

At a “meet the candidate” night, much of the discussion centered over a property tax increase to build a fire station. There were a variety of opinions: Some said the tax increase was too high for taxpayers to swallow in one gulp while others noted the tax rate had not changed in nearly 20 years. Almost everybody agreed that the new station was necessary due to the increased population.

Almost everybody...one man said he was opposed to the construction entirely. The fire station, he said, was being built on the east side of the city whereas he lived on the west side. “It won’t help me or my neighbors, so I don’t think we should pay for it.”

At first blush, I planned on nominating the man for the Cyclops “Dumb Quote of the Year” award, an honor usually won by a member of the Utah Legislature. But a better designation would simply be that the man and those who think like him are simply clueless about the rules for living in a civilized society.

Similar attitudes are often couched in different language:

“I don’t have children in the public schools, so why should I pay for them?”

“We don’t need school breakfast programs. My parents were poor but my mother got up every morning and made me a simple meal.”

“If they really wanted health insurance, they would find a way to get some. Maybe they could start by not eating junk food.”

“We don’t need apartments in our community. We are city of wholesome families and we don’t need the type of people living in apartments or the traffic and crime they bring.”

“Why should I pay for mass transit? I never ride a bus so why should I pay sales tax to fund this.”

Frankly, I seldom heard these comments when I was growing up. We seemed to accept the fact that taxes are something we welcomed as a privilege of living in a civilized society. Police protection, clean water, transportation systems, schools – none of these came free. Taxes were the price we paid for living in America, not Somalia.

Sure, we didn’t want the money wasted on foolish projects. But helping other people in our city was not considered foolish. It was considered an investment in our well-being. Today, anger has blossomed where compassion used to take root.

Why the change? Politics have hardened many people, but an uncommon answer came last week through a mystery writer, Swedish author Henning Mankell.

“When I was growing up, people darned their own socks,” his detective says. “Then one day it was over. Socks with holes in them were thrown out. No one bothered to repair them. The whole society changed.”

“Then it started to spread. It changed our view of right and wrong, of what you were allowed to do to other people. When we didn’t throw everything away, whether it was our woolen socks or human beings, we were a kinder nation.”

I can’t validate his sock-darning rationale, but I do know we don’t live in isolation. We don’t have the availability of electric power and we don’t have economic growth or decent jobs if we have large segments of our population poorly educated or living in poverty.

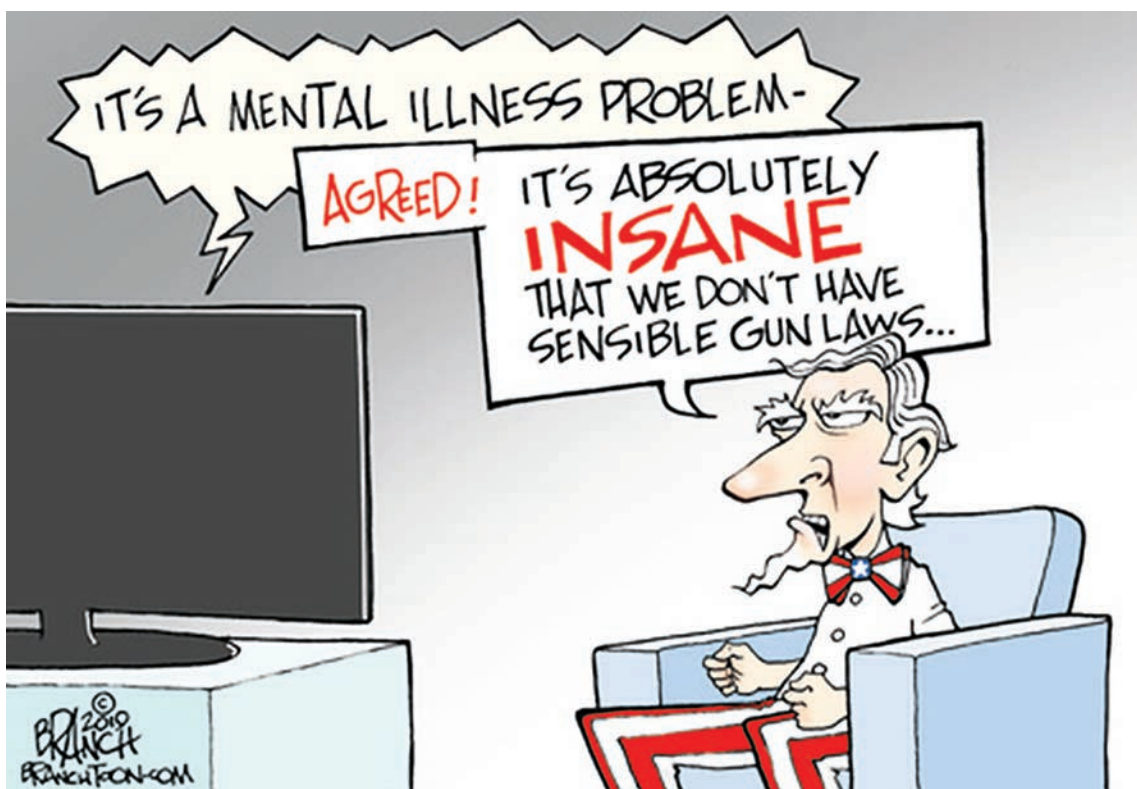

We’re all in this together, no matter how many miles we live from that fire station.

From the EditorKulia I ka nu'u

On this day in 1959 Hawaii became the official 50th and final (at least so far) state of the United States of America. The State of Hawaii is actually a chain of 137 islands and is not only a great hot-spot (literally) for tourists, or the humble home of one of Disney's latest heroines, but the Hawaiian language—consisting of only 12 total letters—can teach us a thing or two about how to get along better with our fellow human beings. For example, “Kulia I ka nu'u” means to do your best and implies a value in both achievement and excellence. If you're familiar with the “hang ten” hand gesture often used by surfers, or “shaka,” it is used to express gratitude and camaraderie. It's similar to giving someone a “thumbs up” but is more meaningful. One of the best Hawaiian phrases to learn and use might also be “A'ō ia.” It's used to cheer someone on or congratulate them for a job well done. Even if someone hasn't quite got the hang of something yet you can say, “Ho'omau” to encourage their persistence and remind them to not give up. The bottom line is that language is powerful. You can use it like a volcano or a lei; to hurt or to heal. I hope you'll choose the latter. Even Moana would be proud. Until next week, Mahalo!

Your vote matters in local elections

As of August 16, the voter turnout for the Cedar City Municipal Primary Election was 32.88% -- less than one-third of the city's registered voters. According to the same results, there are only 12,098 registered voters for Cedar City -- roughly 40% of the total population.

When the preliminary results came out on the day of the primary election, candidates Brittanie Parry and Barry Short were separated by six votes -- SIX. When further results came out on the 16th, they were apart by 23 votes. That means, if you wanted Barry Short to continue to the general election a city council candidate and you didn't vote, you might be the reason he didn't make the cut. A single class of students could have made the difference in that outcome, or all the employees of a business, or all the adults in my extended family, or one of the various sports and recreation clubs in town, or any number of entities could have easily made the difference when the difference was only 23.

I encourage you, reader, to get registered to vote and then make it a point to vote in the general election. Your vote will matter in this local election. Additionally, these are the people who are going to make decisions that will directly affect you, in one way or another, at one point or another, during their term. These are the people who will have the power, or the influence, to help you make the difference you want to see in Cedar City. These are the people who will represent your interests on a day-to-day basis as well as in the long term and in the bigger picture as the city continues to grow.

Only one-third of registered voters voted? Come on Cedar City, we can do better.

Enoch, Summit cemeteries to participate in 'Wreaths Across America'

by Kelsey KEENER

IRON COUNTY TODAY

The Enoch and Summit cemeteries will be the first in Iron County to participate in Wreaths Across America, a nation-wide program that offers tribute to veterans. Wreaths will be placed on veterans' graves on Dec 14 across the nation, and now also in Enoch and Summit. The program includes tributes to those killed or missing in action, prisoners of war, veterans and current military members. The Bald Eagle Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution approached the Enoch City Council earlier this month to discuss and encourage participation in the program.

Wreaths Across America was formed in 2007 to continue the effort started by Morrill Worcester, owner of Worcester Wreaths. Worcester placed a surplus of wreaths on gravestones at Arlington National Cemetery in 1992 to honor the country's veterans and bring attention to the area that had been receiving few visitors. Since then, through volunteerism and donations, Wreaths Across America has developed into a national program that honors fallen warriors annually in December.

A donation of $15 will help place a wreath on a veteran's grave this December. Donations can be made payable to Bald Eagle Chapter DAR and sent to P.O. Box 600295, Paragonah, Utah, 84760. T-shirts are also available via wreathsassamerica2019.itemorder.com.

CEDAR CITY EMPLOYEE OF THE MONTH

by Kelsey KEENER

IRON COUNTY TODAY

Public Works Administrative Assistant Kathy Dahl was awarded Employee of the Month during last week's City Council meeting.

Public Works Director Ryan Marshall presented her with the award; he said the department's division heads came together to nominate Dahl and read their nomination letter.

"She generates and tracks reports for each division, including the County and City sewer connections, road break permits, work orders, garbage can tracking, hydrant meter tracking, water restriction tracking, street sign repair and replacement, street light repair and blanket contracts just to name a few," Marshall said. "She also takes minutes in meetings for various boards, including the Airport board, CATS, Regional Waste Water and the Parking Authority board meeting."

He added that Dahl also takes calls from the public and has a positive attitude and is reliable in her work.

"She has recently revised our blanket contracts and has been the driving force to get these in place for the start of the new fiscal year," he said. "She has improved our tracking of the street signs and lights. She has researched and helped develop our Force Account proposal for the Airport resulting in over $1 million in approved force account work. When (Dahl) is given a task to do, we know it will be well researched, accurate and done in a timely manner."

EMPLOYEE OF THE MONTH KATHY DAHL is congratulated by members of the City Council.

Eldercare Network 'calls on angels'

by Kelsey KEENER

IRON COUNTY TODAY

During last week's Eldercare Network meeting, Calling on Angels owner and founder Christine Fowler spoke about her company and the services she can help provide to the elderly.

Fowler said that she and her staff provide non-medical, in home senior assistance services such as meal preparation, light duty cleaning, basic home care needs and even transportation for errands and appointments.

Fowler explained that she originally moved to the area to be closer to her father and found passion in helping care for senior citizens; she also reviewed a few of the specific services she provides in further detail, starting with companion care.

"We are able to offer a more one-on-one care plan and we find that it's very crucial because our seniors are left lonely," Fowler said. "They've lost their spouse, or their kids live in another state and so on. They don't have much a social life so we go in and we encourage them to do things that interest them."

Fowler said meal planning can also be helpful as cooking can become strenuous as we age, and cooking for one person can be difficult. Calling on Angels staff can either provide ingredients for the client to cook or even help with the preparation.

Calling on Angels also strives to find daily activities that suit clients' needs and abilities, as well as provide transportation (and assistance) for running errands, medical appointments or recreational activities. Fowler said she can also help ensure that clients have the household items they need and offer medication reminders.

"We will either stop by their house or give them a call," she said. "If they don't answer within 30 minutes of us calling them, we do go to their house just to make sure they're up, they're safe and they have taken their medication."

Fowler added that home safety is also a priority.

"We do a wide variety of different things, from daily to weekly, and quarterly to yearly checks of the home," she said. "We do things like checking all the expiration dates on their food; we make sure all the rugs are laid out flat or we remove them so that there's no tripping hazards; we will install safety bars; make sure all the batteries are good in their (fixtures and electronics) as well as clean out their dryer vents; just the things that they used to be able to do that they can't do anymore and that helps keep them safe in their homes."

Calling on Angels can also assist clients with staying connected to family members, such as helping clients to be able to view family photos on social media. Other services include personal hygiene assistance, laundry and light yardwork.

For more information, Fowler can be reached at 385-226-7722.

Vicinity plan, zone change approved

by Kelsey KEENER

IRON COUNTY TODAY

Cedar City Council approved a vicinity plan, zone change and final plat during last week's council meeting.

The vicinity plan for Northfield Estates Subdivision Phases 1 through 5 was approved last week. The subdivision will be located at approximately 2350 Northfield Road and developed by Windmill Plaza, LLC. It will consist of 56 twin home lots ranging from 4,500 to 6,500 square feet in size. It is zoned R-2-2 and designated medium density. Currently, the lot is vacant property. The vicinity plan received a positive recommendation from Planning Commission.

A zone change from Annex

Transition to Industrial and Manufacturing-2 was also approved for property located at 951 North Lund Highway. The parcel is approximately two acres and located between Highway 56 and 1600 North. The proposed zone change is in compliance with the General Plan; and the use of the existing building on the property currently complies with the I&M-2 zone. The zone change received a positive recommendation from Planning Commission.

SUU Professor publishes Spanish poetry collection

by Nikki KOONTZ

SUU MARKETING COMMUNICATIONS

CEDAR CITY — Associate Professor of Spanish Carlos Bertoglio recently wrote and published a collection of Spanish poetry titled Una Temporada en el Ruido. This is Dr. Bertoglio's second poetry publication, and the entirety of this collection was written in just one month thanks to the creative support Southern Utah University offers its faculty.

The concept of the collection was to capture the nature of living abroad and the variety of feelings that surface each time one returns home. Unusual to his normal writing style, Bertoglio dedicated only about two days to each poem in Una Temporada en el Ruido, significantly speeding up the entire process.

"The truth is, this book had been writing itself in my head for a long, long time," said Dr. Bertoglio. "This is a very special book. It was entirely written in the room where I spent the first 30 years of my life in Argentina."

After an unexpected turn of events during a visit to his hometown in Argentina, Dr. Bertoglio was struck with the inspiration and nostalgia that prompted the beginning of his book.

"As it turns out, these months in Argentina were the last ones I spent with my family as a whole," Dr. Bertoglio said. "In a very profound and intuitive way, I was able to anticipate this and in a very imperfect way, capture it in this small book."

As part of the SUU community, Dr. Bertoglio hopes this book will give visibility to creative Spanish literary works. He has presented pieces of the collection at different Cazapalabras club meetings. Cazapalabras is a literary club that Dr. Bertoglio created last year dedicated to reading Spanish texts.

"Carlos Bertoglio is an astounding professor and Cazapalabras is a very fun and engaging club," said Kolton Elmer, a senior at SUU studying Spanish and Pre-Med. "One meeting Dr. Bertoglio shared with us a segment of his book, and I was highly impressed by the thoughts and feeling his poetry invoked. He is very gifted at what he does."

SUU has supported Dr. Bertoglio in his creative endeavors by providing him time to invest in writing the book and by hosting the book launch party. Dr. Bertoglio is thankful for his colleague's continuous support. Una Temporada en el Ruido can be purchased online and shipped all over the world.

Dr. Bertoglio earned his PhD in Romance Languages and Literatures from the University of Florida. He has been an Assistant Professor of Spanish at SUU since August of 2016. Courses Dr. Bertoglio has taught include Beginning Spanish I, Culture/History: Latin America, and Soccer & Society: Latin America.

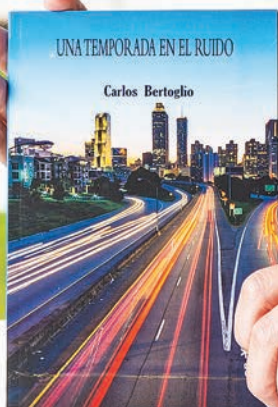

"It was entirely written in the room where I spent the first 30 years of my life in Argentina."

FOR IRON COUNTY TODAY

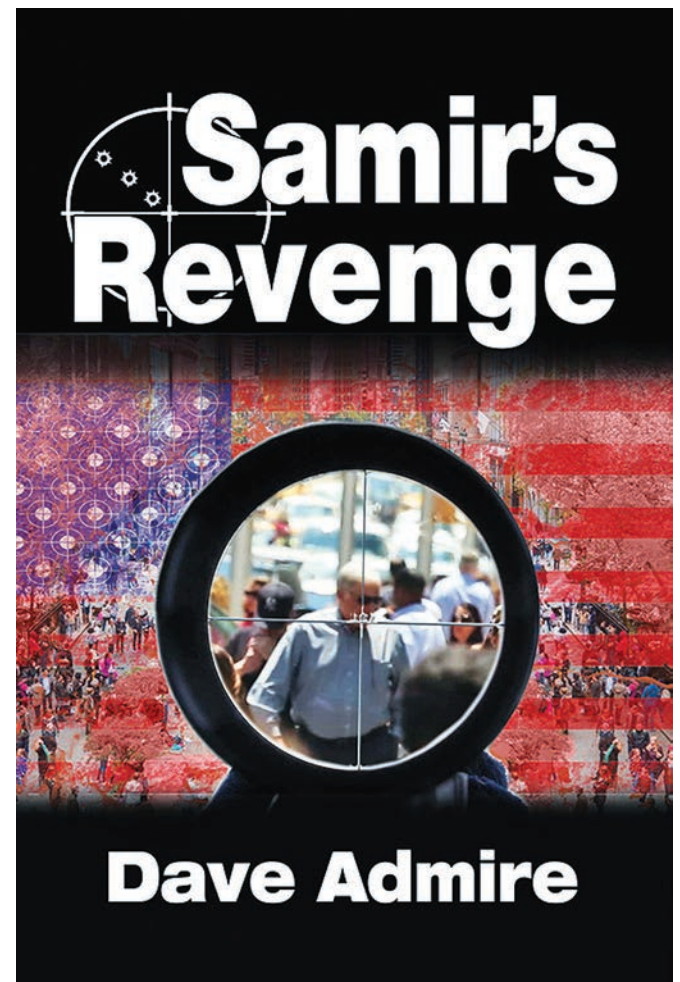

Dave Admire, Cedar City resident and a retired judge and retired SUU Professor of Criminal Justice, is launching his second novel, Samir's Revenge, released on August 1st, 2019. His first novel, Terror in Paris, won a literary award from Reader Views in 2018.

Join him and SUU Professor Dan Swanson for a community discussion on "Understanding Terrorism" at Main Street Books, 25 North Main Street in Cedar City, UT on Saturday, August 24, 2019 at 4:00 p.m. Books will be available for purchase and signing. The publisher is also taking orders at <https://henschelhausbooks.com/product/samirs-revenge/>

Samir's Revenge is a high-level suspense thriller that follows the leader of a terrorist group as he plots and executes attacks on three major cities in the United States. Consumed by a personal vendetta, Samir weaves into these violent acts a plan for the deaths of the three American professors who thwarted the complete success of his attack on Paris. It is "kill or be killed" as the Americans rise up again to protect themselves, their families and their country.

"America is vulnerable to terrorism both homegrown and foreign based," says Dave Admire. "Samir's Revenge is an example of the vulnerability."

THE WORLD IS SO FULL

by Mary Anne ANDERSEN

CEDAR CITY ARTS COUNCIL

It all started with a black bug in the bathroom sink. In a cabin with my sisters in Idaho, I stepped out of the shower, and there he was in the sink. Maybe two inches long, black, with 6 bendy legs and wavy antennae. He did not skitter away, but was just motionless, so that I easily wrapped him securely in a tissue and was going to flush him down the toilet. But I couldn't do it. He was a living creature whose murder I could not recall, so I planned to take him out into the yard. Then it happened: he cried. It was an unmistakable whimpering sound coming from the tissue—twice.

I dressed, then released him into the grass, and hurried to tell my sisters the story. I said at first that it was a cricket, but from the description they said it was a beetle, and they were skeptical about the crying, to say the least. They teased me about making an entomological discovery that was sure to land me on the cover of National Geographic, but they weren't there. It truly cried!

Our plan for that day was to ride into Yellowstone Park in search of wildlife, and by any measure, it was a great success. First, we saw a big moose and her calf, standing in the river. They are huge animals, and mean tempered, I understand. My husband says they look like they were put together with spare parts, but they were not interested in us, so we drove on. Our first spotting in the Park itself was a few elk in a meadow, at some distance; later, we saw some right off the road.

Binoculars helped us watch a busy osprey nest on the top of a thin stone pillar. We watched them come and go, sometimes one in the nest, sometimes three, or two. Were they a family with one offspring? A mother teaching two fledglings to fly? We couldn't tell, but the soaring and swooping involved were a thrill to watch.

Bison are the embodiment of power—ugly power, at that. We saw hundreds of them, great herds in the distance, a few solitary ones up close. The joy was watching the brown babies gambol about the meadows. They ran, kicked up their heels, chased just like adorable puppies. When the adults rolled in the dust, it was, you should excuse the trite expression, awesome.

The real coup was a bear! We were the first car in line to spot him, just a few yards off the road. He didn't bolt, just ate and then lazily crossed the road right in front of us. He wasn't big, maybe an adolescent, but bear sightings are rare these days, and we felt so lucky.

Over dinner, we counted up our animal sightings, but my sisters weren't keen on including the beetle. Is size the only measure of nature's wonder? As the visionary author, Robert Louis Stevenson, wisely expressed, "The world is so full of a number of things, I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings."

COMMUNITY &
PERSONAL INTEREST IN IRON COUNTY

Life

by J. Franklin FOSTER

FOR IRON COUNTY TODAY

If the iconic American actor, John Wayne, had his way, he would be remembered for his starring roles in Western pictures and what those characters stood for:

Well, both are alive and well at 2290 W. 400 N. in Cedar City.

Market Grille owner and local realtor Mona Nies keeps the Duke's image liberally displayed in her restaurant, and literally down the hall. And the Thursday livestock auction keeps his spirit alive.

The Cedar City Livestock Auction has served Southern Utah's livestock owners and residents for the past 75 years, moving through its atmospheric quarters an amazing number of animals. Last year alone, it sold over 121 hogs, 265 horses, 5,500 goats and sheep, and an eye-popping 15,400 heads of cattle. Holy cow, they ain't horsin' around!

The owner is former Southern Utah University student and current Kane County resident, Duke Cox. His first name is poetic justice.

"Every business is a people business and what I love most about the auction is the quality of people that is associated with this industry. We are honest, hard working people connected to God and the environment. We try to be good stewards," says Duke, 48, married and father of five. His namesake would be proud.

Cox bought the business from longtime Iron County resident Brett Whittier.

"Succession was important to me. I wanted to make sure this tradition continued," Whittier says, as holds onto his cow prod in the small crescent shaped arena where they will sell the animals.

Ringman Hal Winterton, 78, agrees. "I've been in the livestock business all my life.

AUCTIONEER AND OWNER, DUKE COX calls out the bids, as his Ringman and former owner
Brett Whittier,

There are no finer people you can find. In Utah, there's only four auction houses left. So, this place serves a vital role to the community and the industry."

With the flourishing of the Internet, one might wonder why even have auctions? "A bonded in-house auction is a secure and a reliable way to market your livestock," Cox explains. "It has a time-tested method to establish true-value for livestock."

And so, every Thursday at 11:00 am (10:00 am on the first Thursday of the month when horses are sold) they begin. Cox serves as the auctioneer; Jetta Robinson, the certified weigh master; Whittier and Winterton the arena wranglers.

The audience is an eclectic bunch: well scrubbed, quiet FLDS families, weathered and stoic Paiutes, beefy and hardened ranchers and dusty and whipcord-strong cowhands. Quite a few are from Nevada and northern Utah. It seems for most that muddy boots, worn blue jeans, rodeo belts, print long-sleeve collared shirts and caps or cowboy hats are the appearance of choice. Scattered throughout are suburbanite families, excited to see an auction for the first time, hoping to get a good deal on a pet horse or goat.

An older sorrel quarter horse quietly enters from a gate on the left opened by Whittier and parades around the dirt floor. Cox reads the notes on him—"it says she's well broke, well broke"—and the bidding begins. The auctioneer's quick patter is actually comprehensible, even pleasant to listen to. He gestures to the buyer to indicate offering and then gives a thumbs up upon acceptance. The horse, well groomed and with solid conformation, is sold for only four hundred dollars. But the new owner's daughter, a pig tailed, blue-eyed blond 10-year-old, can't contain her excitement. Winterton opens the gate and the mare exits to the right. It is a well-practiced process that will repeat itself over the next three hours with more than 400 different animals. From the top of the wooden benches that stack nine levels high, an old timer cracks, "If that ol' mare makes it home without dyin', they got themselves a good horse."

The next group of animals is the goats. Every imaginable shape and size and color parade through and when a herd of 11 adorable

Wait Training (Part 1)

Have you ever had to wait for something? Did you feel like you had to wait too long for it? Maybe it was a package that turned your excitement into disappointment because the product was incorrect, incomplete or damaged. Maybe you waited in the wrong line or had to wait so long that you gave up and figured it wasn't worth waiting for anyway. Even with a plethora of patience, waiting can still be frustrating.

After all, we're a busy bunch these days. It's arguable that though more advanced, we are still less productive than our predecessors. Understandable given all the distractions that technology spoils us with.

Perhaps we just need a little more patience and prodding to find something that's worth waiting long enough for? Easier said than done when we have been trained in a "Want it NOW, get it NOW" society. Speed seems to have become our dominant mentality and motivation. In many cases, if we can't get what we want, when we want it, it's not worth it. If we can't have something shipped in 2 days (for free), delivered in 30 minutes or less (still hot), or instantly downloaded, we tend to feel gyped and jaded about our investments and purchases.

We whine in lines, get sour in rush hour, and cringe or become unhinged when anything else detours, or slows us down. We think our lives and future happiness have been unalterably interrupted and we feel completely justified in erupting. More often than not, even with things worth waiting for, by the time we reach the proverbial "end of the line" we can become so immobilized by impatience that we can't enjoy the spoils of the waiting-war because we have to spend time picking up the pieces from the time and/or temper we lost.

How do we counteract this wait gain? Perhaps a personal plan to help us manage the monotony from monopolizing our peace is called for. Now, we may not always or often be able to prevent gaining wait, but we certainly don't have to lose our patience in the process. True, patience won't always help us get to places, people, or products faster, but it will help us get along a little longer and make the wait more bearable; whether it's red-lights and traffic jams, or checkout lines and doctor's offices. And have you ever noticed that this frustrating phenomenon only seems to happen when we're already late? The more behind we are, it seems the heavier the weight of the wait is on our shoulders.

Even if we could stay safe inside our homes from any possible danger of delays, we would still have to wait for food to be cooked/delivered, our favorite show to air and suffer through all the commercials, to enjoy or at least endure life. At the end of the day, which we also have to wait for, we cannot escape the great wait. But...wait for it...there is hope!

All roads lead to home

I was a freshman at Cedar High School when I first got the "itch" to travel. Madame Whetman inspired my first dream to wander. That dream was realized four years later when I headed to Paris and then onto England. As the kids say now days, "it was epic." I saw the Mona Lisa, L'arc de Triumphe, wandered the Monmartre, climbed to the top of the Eiffel Tower, and was awe struck by Notre Dame. En route to London, we visited St. Malo, Mont St-Michel and then visited Normandy (that moment was life changing).

Since my first trip abroad, I have added at least a dozen more countries to my passport. But who would have thought that I would put Madame Whetman's French to use on my most recent adventure to the country of Peru?

In fact, nearly 25 years ago, I minored in French at SUU and my French accent was still intact. It was at our hotel in Icca, Peru that I met Sonia Savarino. Sonia was halfway through her year long trip around the world with her husband and six-year-old son. I was in awe of her "bucket list" and for a moment incredibly jealous. Sonia invited me to be her friend on Facebook and to follow the rest of her journey which would conclude in December (the world is certainly a lot smaller than it was the summer of '93 when I headed to Paris).

Peru is unlike any country I have visited. I really thought that I was prepared for what I might see. After all, I had traveled to Armenia. I had seen the effects of the earthquake in 1988 that still lingered a decade later. But I was wrong. After visiting Icca, we visited Pacarus and the surrounding beaches. Both stops were beautiful, but very much tourist destinations. However, the poverty of the rural areas through which we passed haunted me.

It was in Lima that I discovered Peru's little lie. Lima's population is estimated to be almost 10 million—you should hear the incessant honking of horns. The nicer areas of Lima reminded me very much of Boston. The city was marked by nice cars, beautiful homes, and well-dressed residents. But then I got on the train and I traveled to its last stop in Lima. I will never forget that image. It is one I cannot even describe. But it stirred me, penetrated me, and marked me.

I walked away from my journey grateful for so many things—toilet paper, clean water, napkins, transportation, wash cloths, and quiet. I found the beauty of Peru in its people. The kindness and humility of the Pena family changed me. Their joy in life was not in "things" but in each other.

My flight home was long, and it was solo. But I thought a lot. When I saw the desert sky from the Phoenix airport, I was beyond grateful. As I knelt down by my bed that night, I realized that I had hit the jackpot to be born in the United States of America, in Utah and in CC town. What I did to garner this lottery I will never know. I wish my French friend Sonia well on her journey, but I think I am content to be home for quite some time. I will follow Rigby around the hilltops searching for the "Big Buck" drinking in this land of color savoring the quiet and the bright beautiful night time skies.

Iron County Schools Receive $1.237 Million in Trust Fund

BOARD OF EDUCATION URGES PARENTS TO JOIN SCHOOL COMMUNITY COUNCILS

from Deena LOYOLA
FOR IRON COUNTY TODAY

As Iron School District begins the new year with $1.237 million in School LAND Trust Funds; its share of a record statewide $82.66 million, the School Children's Trust Section at the Utah State Board of Education urges parents to join their School Community Councils and determine how to best spend their school's trust funds. Every K-12 school in Utah has its own School Community Council or Charter Trust Land Council, comprising parents, teachers and the principal.

Each council determines the greatest academic needs of their students and prepares a plan to improve student academic performance. The Council then allocates its portion of School LAND Trust Funds to this effort. "School community councils give Utah parents a unique opportunity to engage with teachers and a principal to help direct meaningful spending in their child's school," said Utah State Superintendent of Public Instruction Sydnee Dickson. "The School LAND Trust Funds put dollars to work to improve student academic achievement." School LAND Trust Funds are annual earnings from the $2.5 billion Permanent State School Fund. This permanent fund was created at statehood and accompanies a 3.3 million-acre land grant for public schools. Revenue from these school trust lands is deposited into the Permanent State School Fund.

This year's record distribution of $82.66 million in School LAND Trust Funds totals nearly three percent of the $2.5 billion Permanent State School Fund. A formula in Utah law determines annual distributions, which are allocated to each K-12 school based largely on a per-pupil formula. Since 1994, the School LAND Trust Program has distributed $617 million to Utah schools. Last year, Utah schools spent $74 million in trust funds on teachers and aides to reduce class sizes, professional development, classroom technology, and textbooks.

Four agencies build, invest, administer, and protect the Utah School LAND Trust Program: SITLA, the School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, manages Utah's 3.3 million acres of school trust lands, depositing revenue into the Permanent State School Fund. SITFO, the School and Institutional Trust Funds Office, invests the $2.5 billion Permanent State School Fund. The School Children's Trust Section at the Utah State Board of Education administers the School LAND Trust Program. This office trains and supports School Community Councils as they prepare academic plans to be reviewed and approved by local school boards. The Lands Trust Protection and Advocacy Office was created by the Utah Legislature in 2018 to represent the beneficiary interests of Utah schools.

Five smooth stones (part 1)

1 SAMUEL 17

There are few biblical stories more familiar than the famous showdown between the young shepherd boy David and the mighty warrior Goliath. Many modern day movies/books have used this scenario of unassuming underdogs facing giant foes and seemingly impossible odds. In some situations in life we all feel like an undeserving underdog at times. Perhaps you may even think that David was victorious because he was special, chosen of God, or because that's his story, not yours. God doesn't preserve these powerful biblical stories just for something inspiring to read at bedtime. David's victory is an epitome for your life and the Goliaths you are and will face.

Have you ever faced a Goliath in your life? You've probably faced and fought more than one and more than once. There are many types of Goliaths. Anger, Illness, Failure, Disease, Divorce, Addiction, Depression and Loneliness are all in Goliath's gargantuan family of foes. And each of them have rotten relatives waiting to worry, weaken and wear out even

It can be scary facing any enemy, especially one that seems bigger, stronger and more experienced. It is especially daunting if you've never faced such a foe before. David was counseled not to fight because Goliath had more experience and was a warrior from his youth. Nevertheless, as God helped David slay his Goliaths, He will help you slay yours.

It's been said that it's not the size of your problems, but the size of your God that matters. David knew the size of his God because God had delivered him many times from the lions and bears that threatened his the worthiest warriors.

Just as Goliath mocked the Israelite army and then David, someone or something may keep mocking you, calling you out, reminding you of all the times you've lost, or of all your weaknesses and all of the reasons why you won't/can't win, ever. Fear not, the same God that directed and delivered David will direct and deliver you. Though the world is full of giants with swords, spears and javelins, God knows how to help you defeat each and every one.

father's flocks. However, David's skill with a sling was the not the only attribute that was tried and tested during those trials. The fortitude and faith David would need to face and defeat Goliath was gained the same way that we can and must also obtain it. It is often through our greatest trials that come our greatest teachings and triumphs.

Armed with his sling and an unshakeable testimony in the power of God's deliverance, David faithfully faced Goliath. Though he was offered strong armor and a sword, they were untested and uncomfortable. Instead, David went armed with what he knew best, his God and his trusty sling. His previous battles with the lions and bears had prepared him. His confidence and competence had been honed with every hurl. Now it was time to find some giant-slaying stones.

Billies come in, the audience smiles. Cox spots a young man, a regular attendee, and his girlfriend, and says, "Rumor has it someone has gotten engaged. I can't imagine a better dowry than these here goats." The man laughs but doesn't bite. When they are finally sold, Winterton closes the gate behind them and remarks, "They got 'em all, and the smell too!"

Next come the sheep. A husband and wife couple get up to leave. Cox quips, "Well, Mac, you actually stayed for 10 minutes today," His wife smiles, "That's good for him." The man bought what he came for, grins and waves goodbye.

One formidable ram with an intimidating rack of horns gets feisty, and Whittier wisely steps behind one of three metal guard-walls for protection. The ram bays loud and long. Soon, though, Winterton—the Livestock Whisperer—coos and clucks and kisses at him, guiding him around and calming him down. The two seasoned vets set a good example to the youngsters on how to compassionately and professionally handle the animals.

Out back in the vast Byzantine waiting stalls, Cox retains 12-15 part time employees, mostly high school and college-aged, to keep the animals organized. They all seem united by their love for the industry.

Two odd lots are sold next: a family of Alpacas and a cage of chickens.

A farmer arrives late. Cox quips, "Rayese, you missed it. We just sold some chickens."

Holding his wife's hands, he climbs the stands and jokes, "Good thing I came in late, then!"

The pacing of the auction is crisp and relaxed. In the audience, generational ranchers such as the Bradshaws, the Webbs, the Christensens, and the Holts bypass the traditional number cards that buyers use to bid on the animals, and instead gesture with a flip of the hand and nod of the head. One millennial in particular stands out. He doesn't wear a cowboy hat to cover his shaggy dark hair parted in the middle, and his orange Oklahoma City Thunder basketball shirt seems out of place. But this is Jarrett Webb, 30, one of many young talents that are the future of Southern Utah ranching. At times he seems bored, more interested in his cell-phone, but his well-trained eye doesn't miss a thing. Unfortunately, the pressure is on him to get it right. Recently, his father died tragically in a farming accident. "I took over the business because I've always enjoyed working with my dad around the livestock." Then a smile plays on his lips. "Plus, animals are easier to work with than people."

The cattle, hundreds of them, are sold last. A humongous 2075-pound bull marches in and sticks his massive head through the arena's five-foot-high metal bars, electrifying the crowd. One wonders, what if the beast went berserk?

Cox chuckles, "Those shields and metal bars are there for a reason. On occasion we've had a broken bone from kicks and bucking animals. But for the most part, we keep the animals calm. We treat 'em right. And as you can see, they behave well during the process."

That they do. And the process keeps the industry thriving. But the Cedar City Livestock Auction is more than a business, it's part of the connective tissue that honors our proud traditions and helps make Festival City such a great place to live.

And somewhere in heaven, a smiling Duke is giving his thumbs up.

In Loving Memory
Shawn "Tookie" Webb
6/7/83 - 8/16/09

*Shawn you were so loved,
as loved as one could be.
For you were everything in life,
you meant the world you see.
But sometimes life can be unkind, and hearts are torn in two.
Nothing could ever compare to the pain of losing you.
It's been ten years now, and we wonder How can that be?
But yet at the same time it feels more like an eternity.
It broke our hearts to lose you,
And reminds us how without you,
Life has never been the same.
There's an empty space in our heart, that nothing will ever fill.
The fact that you're no longer with us,
will always cause us pain.
But you're forever in our heart,
and you always will remain.
Until we meet again.*

We all love and miss you so very, very much.
Your loving Family.

Bud D Orton

Bud D Orton returned to his Heavenly Father on August 19, 2019 just before "sun-up" which would have been his measurement of the start of a new day. He was born in Parowan, Utah on November 23, 1929 to Orson Winston Orton and Elsa Marie Decker. He was the middle of three children.

He married his high school sweetheart, Betty Jean Robb, October 1, 1949. Their marriage was sealed a year later just before their first child was born. They celebrated over 60 years of marriage.

They began their life together in a little house that had belonged to Jean's grandmother in Paragonah, Utah. 5 of their children, 2 sons and 3 daughters, were born there. When the house sustained significant fire damage, they decided to move to Parowan. There they remained, adding one more daughter to the family.

Everybody who knew Bud, knew that he loved to stay busy. He loved to garden and spent many summertime hours in his vegetable garden. In the winter, he spent just as many hours in his wood working shop, crafting everything from kitchen cabinets to children's toys. Many of his children have inherited a love for these two activities. He loved Parowan, its people, his home and considered himself a true "Parowanite". He mastered many trades including a master glazier, brick maker/layer, and read meters in Parowan for several years after his retirement. He spent the last 9 years of his life living alone and very independently—proudly taking care of himself and helping others. It was only when his health began to fail, that he went to live with Stuart and Tamara in St. George where he was lovingly cared for until the end.

He was preceded in death by his parents; both of his siblings; one grandchild; and one great-grandchild. He is survived by all of his children: Brad and Melanie Orton, Ann and Carlyle Gurr, Stuart and Tamara Orton, Leslie Orton, Laurel and Jeff Neil, and Amber and Tai Weaver; 17 of his 18 grandchildren; 39 great-grandchildren, and 4 great-great grandchildren.

Visitation will be held prior to the services from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. in the 3rd/4th Ward Relief Society Room. Interment will be at the Parowan Cemetery under the direction of Southern Utah Mortuary. Online condolences can be sent to www.sumortuary.com

REDS RALLY FOR OPENING-NIGHT ROAD WIN IN OT

by Tom ZULEWSKI

IRON COUNTY TODAY

In three separate Region 9 games last year, the Cedar Reds were tied or in the lead in the fourth quarter. In each case, the opponent came back to win.

With its new nickname in place, the Reds found a way to get the job done and pull off a comeback to remember in the 2019 season opener.

Quarterback Jaron Garrett hit Jack Cook on a 36-yard touchdown pass with less than three minutes left to tie the score, and then Kolbe Meek finished the job with his second touchdown of the night, a 3-yard run in overtime that gave Cedar a come-from-behind 30-27 road win over 5A Spanish Fork on Aug. 16.

Cedar had trailed 16-3 at the half as Dons quarterback Kaden Holt threw a touchdown pass and ran for another. The Reds were able to take the lead for the first time late in the third quarter on the strength of a Garrett touchdown pass to Ben Ellis and a 1-yard run from Meek.

Spanish Fork was able to reclaim the lead with 6:36 left in the fourth and added the two-point conversion, but it wouldn't be enough as the Reds were the lone Region 9 team to produce a win on opening night.

Cedar will stay on the road this Friday for its second and last preseason game, a matchup with Juab to play the Wasps in a 7 p.m. kickoff.

Beavers rough up Falcons in opener

by Tom ZULEWSKI

IRON COUNTY TODAY

If any play in the early stages of a football game would go far in determining the outcome, the Canyon View Falcons got a painful lesson in its season opener Aug. 16.

When quarterback Brisin Jake threw the first of his four interceptions on the second play from scrimmage, it started the snowball the Beaver Beavers used to roll to a convincing victory.

Crayton Hollingshead ran for two touchdowns and quarterback Ryker Albrecht added two scores of his own – one on the ground and one through the air – as Beaver put the game away early in a 60-7 rout over Canyon View.

Hollingshead also intercepted the initial pass from Jake that led to Albrecht's 2-yard run on the next play 25 seconds in, and it was the beginning of a very long opening night for the Falcons.

"We didn't do a good job of preparing our kids," Canyon View head coach Chris Sawyers said. "I thought they were prepared, and we did a terrible job. We didn't tackle well, we didn't block well, and we played scared."

2019 SUU Position Preview: Offensive Line

by Bryson LESTER

SUU ATHLETICS STRATEGIC COMMUNICATION

CEDAR CITY — Under the direction of assistant coach Aaron Fernandez, the Thunderbird offensive line is loaded with experience and young talent heading into the 2019 season, while also having some big shoes to fill from last year.

The T-Birds have some NFL caliber talent to replace, as Marquez Tucker was signed by the Chicago Bears following the 2018 campaign.

“That’s what it’s all about in coaching,” Fernandez said. “I recruited Marquez, we had a vision for him and to see him buy in and earn his stripes up there was a proud moment for me and a proud moment for T-Bird Nation.”

With over a week of camp under their belts Fernandez likes where the group is as a whole up to this point.

“We’re working one step at a time,” he said. “It’s a process, but the group is doing a really good job. We’ve got good leadership, and then we’ve got a mix of young guys that are really battling and will have an important role this season.”

With multiple Preseason All-American honors to his name, along with a Preseason All-Big Sky nod, Zach Larsen is primed for a big senior season here at Southern Utah at the center position. He’s been a starter since his first game on campus with the Thunderbirds.

“He’s earned any type of accolade he’s getting,” Fernandez said. “He’s one of the hardest workers I’ve ever been around, and the thing I keep trying to build in him is his leadership. He used to lead by example, but he’s also become a vocal leader now for us and he’s earned all that stuff. I just keep reminding him not to sip the Kool-Aid. He’s not a cocky guy in any way, he’s super humble about it all, so we won’t have any problem there. But he’s earned every part of that.”

Behind Larsen is a talented group of o-linemen with both experience and a lot of potential.

ANITA BUNKER

“Braxton Jones is having a fantastic camp holding down the blindside tackle for us, he’s still very young and has a high ceiling for us, but he’ll be one of if not the premiere left tackle in the league, that’s where he’s headed with how hard he’s working and how much he’s developed,” Fernandez said. “PJ Nu’usa, Artese Gregory and Josh Madsen have all been holding it down as well, they’re doing a great job battling for a couple of those starting roles that I don’t think are solidified yet.”

Fernandez went on to mention a few other players that have been impressive through camp and he thinks will make a big impact this upcoming season.

“Mitchell Halverson is young, but he’s been here for a couple camps,” he said. “Very proud of Lyle Santos, playing tackle at a young age after never playing it before. And Canaan Yarro, he’ll be the next big-time center here at SUU.”

The Thunderbirds will open their season on August 31 in Las Vegas against the UNLV Rebels.

A night to remember and stuff to forget

Hard to believe, but another opening night of high-school football has come and gone, seared into our consciousness faster than a speeding wide receiver on a post pattern.

For the Cedar Reds, the game against Spanish Fork was a case of good breaks finally falling into its corner. For the Canyon View Falcons, the opener against Beaver is one that won't be placed in any time capsule unless a shredder gets involved.

And the new RPI system created by the UHSAA gives the games a lot more meaning.

With Cedar's win over the Dons on an overtime TD run by Kolbe Meek, they have a huge advantage when the RPI helps decide playoff teams in October. Beating a 5A school and being the only Region 9 team to win on opening night is the boost all coaches would probably crave, even if the system isn't quite fully understood just yet.

Beaver will also benefit when playoff time comes around after the Beavers demolished Canyon View 60-7 in a game that was basically over early in the second quarter. As head coach Jon Marshall said after the game, even the preseason games matter now.

Also, on the football front: There are still no changes in the ongoing channel carriage dispute with DirecTV and Nexstar Broadcasting, owners of ABC4 and CW30 in Salt Lake City. We lamented in this space last week how viewers with the satellite service were shut out of seeing Cedar and Hawaii alum John Ursua as he chases an NFL roster spot with the Seattle Seahawks, but we're happy to report this week's game against the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday night was available on Fox, Channel 13 locally.

Mitch Talbot made his return from the injured list in a start for the Columbus Clippers on Aug. 17, but lasted only three innings and 53 pitches against the Charlotte Knights before being placed on the IL again 24 hours later.

Talbot didn't allow a hit in that stretch, but his status is in question for the rest of the season. The Clippers are going to be a playoff team – they have a 10-game division lead over Indianapolis with 15 to play – and we hope Talbot can get healthy and get back for another shot in the Triple-A playoffs.

Girls soccer started before school did in Iron County, and the teams are off to a flying start, even if the games are only in preseason mode. With a new head coach, Canyon View is off to a 2-0 start with wins over Payson (5-0) and Juab (3-1). Addie Newman and Cassidy Cox have scored three goals apiece for the Falcons in the wins.

Cedar split its first two games, a 10-0 win over Cottonwood and a 3-2 loss to Real Salt Lake Academy. Lexi Bird scored four goals in the win over the Colts and Logann Laws has three markers in Cedar's first two games.

Both teams will open Region 9 play on the road, with Cedar facing Dixie and CV traveling to Hurricane. Both matches kick off at 7:30 p.m.

For the third straight year, the PRCA cowboys will be at the Iron County Fair and Rodeo for Labor Day weekend, Aug. 31 and Sept. 2. With six weekends left until the top 15 are determined for the Wrangler National Finals Rodeo in December, there's breaking news in the Wright family. In just his second year of professional rodeo, Stetson Wright is not only strong in bull riding, but he's on top of the all-around leader board.

Through Aug. 18, Stetson has earned $162,714 to lead the all-around and is second in the bull riding standings with $151,109, trailing only Sage Kimzey by $25,000.

Adding to the stretch run, Ryder Wright is back in his familiar place, atop the saddle bronc standings with $200,481, good for a $31,000 lead over 2016 world champ Zeke Thurston of Big Valley, Alberta.

With $26,000 available each day, the 10 WNFR runs in Las Vegas will be the ultimate decider of who gets the gold buckle. With multiple Wright family members in the mix, don't be surprised if another one adds to the championship legacy.

SUU Soccer set to open season with exhibition against Utah State

by Kyle BIRNBRAUER

FOR IRON COUNTY TODAY

Last season the Thunderbirds won just two games, both in Cedar City, but that didn't come without a few bright spots.

MaKenzie Lawrence returns for her final season as a Thunderbird after scoring seven goals last year, one goal short of the all-time single season record. The redshirt senior will come into the season ranked fifth all-time in career goals and eighth all-time in career points. Lawrence was also named to the Big Sky All-Conference Second Team.

Brianna Aldridge led the Big Sky in saves and saves per game in her first season as a Thunderbird last year. Her 102 saves were just four short of the all-time single season record and have her sitting in seventh all-time in career saves after just one season.

Eleven new Thunderbirds have joined the roster for the 2019 season, including 10 freshmen and one transfer junior. Rachel Wolter transferred to Southern Utah in the spring from New Mexico State after playing over 1,500 minutes for the Aggies in two seasons as a defender. She is joined by her sister Annie Wolter and nine other freshmen: Gabriella Pagani, Jaylynn Barton, Amberly Hastings, Emilia Eir Pálsdóttir, Katie Lulay, Madison DeHerrera, Alia Shatswell, Quincey Loveridge, and Isabella Whitmore.

New assistant coach Brielle Bourgeois just recently wrapped up a four-year career as a defender for the Thunderbird soccer team. She racked up 4,768 minutes on the field, playing in every game from 2015-2018 except for three. The California native had two goals and three assists while playing on the back line and was a three-time Big Sky All-Academic honoree during her career.
